Seven Texas legislators, representing thirty-one counties, from which W. T. has 518 students enrolled, visited the campus Thursday afternoon and were entertained with a dinner at Cousins Hall in the evening.

TB Is Found In Poultry Flocks In Randall Co.

All Poultry Raisers Wishing Flocks Tested May Have the Service Performed Free

Dr. A. J. Lewis, veterinarian with the State Livestock Sanitary Commission recently finished the first check-up on tests of poultry for tuberculosis.

The project was started by the County Agent as a survey to determine the extent to which tuberculosis exists in farm flocks in Randall County.

The results, so far, indicate that this work should be continued. Eleven out of the first sixteen flocks tested showed more or less infection. Seventy-six re-actors were eliminated from these flocks. This showed a total of about three and one-third percent tubercular as a result of this survey. Most of the diseased birds were posted by Dr. Lewis and found to have pronounced leisions which were easily identified.

The Panhandle of Texas, and especially Randall county is known to have very little tuberculosis. The source of infection in chickens is thought to be from breeding stock and baby chickens brought from breeders in the middle west and shipped in.

Dr. Lewis will continue these tests, beginning Tuesday, Dec. 15. Any farm flock owner wanting their birds tested should make application at the County Agents office not later than Saturday of this week. There is no charges for the testing, the only obligation being that all re-actor birds be destroyed immediately.

Postoffice Work Gets Underway as Basement Is Dug

Construction Engineer and Contractor Arrive Yesterday to Begin the Construction Work

Excavation for the new postoffice building was a mighty short job, all of the work being accomplished Wednesday and Thursday of last week. Cocke & Braden made the excavation with their steam shovel, which threw out a stream of dirt eight hours per day, loading trucks every minute.

F. C. French arrived yesterday from Borger to be construction engineer for the government on the new building. R. H. Richter, member of the contracting firm, also arrived with machinery and members of his crew.

Lumber and cement have been ordered and will arrive here the early part of next week. It is expected that actual construction will be uder way during the coming week.

The contractors have until June to complete the building.

Assurance Given That Highway 60 to Be Soon Paved

Mother Mrs. Oatis Heroine In Late Popular Fiction

"Gone With the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell, the popular new book that is taking the country by storm is of particular interest to Mrs. B. F. Oatis of Canyon.

In the battle of Resaca, Ga., which was taken by the Yankees just before advancing on to Atlanta, the book tells of the women of the town watering the wounded soldiers after the battle, from a bucket and dipper. Mrs. Oatis states that there was only one woman in the town and that was her mother, Mrs. A. C. Waddill, with her two small boys, who were left when the other residents of the town evacuated the place before the advance of the Yankee army. Her husband was somewhere in the Rebel forces, but he was not heard from for many months.

Mrs. Oatis was later born in the house that the Yankees left standing, but which was riddled with bullet holes. The mother and small boys huddled in the huge fire place and thus were prevented from being wounded or killed.

Mrs. Waddill died in 1916 at the age of 78 years and 10 months. Mrs. Oatis relates many other interesting stories as told to her by her mother regarding the different incidents as set forth in the book, "Gone With the Wind."

Half Inch Rain Covers County to Improve Wheat

Slow Falling Rain Last Saturday Morning Is of Great benefit to Growing Crops

Randall county was blanketed by a .55 inch rain Saturday morning.

Rain started early in the morning and continued slowly for several hours. Every drop of the moisture went into the ground.

Wheat was greatly benefitted by this rain, according to farmers who have been in Canyon the past few days. Early wheat was suffering from lack of moisture in some sections of the county, according to reports, but since the rain the

Mrs. John Knight Died Sunday Morn.

Pioneer of County Was First Bride; Funeral Srvice Was Held on Monday

Mrs. John Knight, 74, died Sunday morning at 5:00 o'clock, following an illness of more than a year's duration. Mrs. Knight held the distinction of being the first bride to be married in Canyon, the marriage being performed on March 1, 1891.

Mrs. Knight was Miss Margaret Roberts before her marriage. She was born in Jefferson City, Mo., on January 27, 1862. She taught school in Jefferson City before coming to Texas. Colorado City was the first town in Texas in which she lived, coming to the Southwest from Missouri on account of her health. In 1888 she moved to Estacada, Crosby County, to live with her brother, Dick Roberts.

She came to Canyon in 1890 to visit with her brother, S. E. Roberts, a pioneer merchant in Canyon. At that time she met Mr. Knight, to whom she was later married. Rev. Ben F. Jackson, a circuit rider from Miami, performed the marriage ceremony.

As a matter of history, the first funeral conducted in Canyon was on the wedding day of Mr. and

Road Construction Does Not Get Underway This Week

Underpass Contract Is With Santa Fe, and WPA Is Running Short on Funds for Work

Neither of the two highway jobs in Randall county were started this week, and nothing definite could be learned yesterday regarding the time they would start.

C. B. Ashford, superintendent for the Austin Bridge Company, which has the contract for the underpass, is here and has his work houses completed. Materials are being assembled, but no work order has been received. According to the best information available, the delay in starting is due to the fact that the Santa Fe officials have not returned the contract from the Chicago office.

Former Physician To Haile Selassie Lectures Thursday

Relates Difficulties Met During Recent Struggle

Dr. Thomas Lambie, court physician to Emperor Halie Selassie before the Italian invasion of Abyssinia last year, was the guest speaker in a special assembly held Thursday morning.

Dr. Lambie told of securing the first hospital in Abyssinia, the conditions during the war, described the rioting during the last days of the war, related difficulties encountered upon every hand in his private campaign against infection and disease both before and after the war, and discussed many things unknown to the persons "back home."

The speaker closed his lecture with the expression that, though he was not actually a missionary now and was not at present engaged in trying to get aid for the missionaries still in Ethiopia, he hoped that they would soon be freed from the rigors of the rioting continuing in Abyssinia.

Many students expressed the opinion that the most interesting excerpt from his speech was the brief resume of the history of Abyssinia and its relations to Christianity, geography and literature, while others were more impressed with the illustration Dr. Lambie made of the efficacy of prayer in his description of the first hospital in Ethiopia.

C. S. Lambie, construction engineer of Amarillo was instrumental in bringing his brother, Dr. Lambie, to W. T. for a lecture.

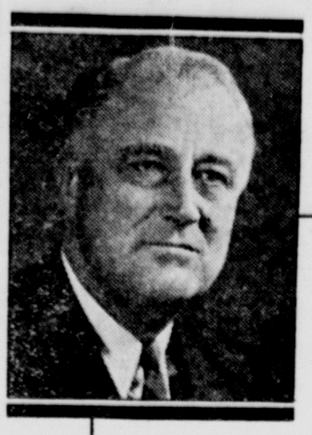
President Roosevelt Endorses 30th Christmas Seal Sale



Below is a facsimile of a statement issued by Franklin Delano Roosevelt urging the people of the country to do their part in supporting the nationwide campaign to raise funds for the control of tuberculosis. President Roosevelt is Honorary Vice-President of the National Tuberculosis Association which with its two thousand affiliated tuberculosis associations is conducting the thirtieth annual Christmas Seal sale from Thanksgiving through Christmas.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

November 12, 1936

Thanksgiving Day this year marks an important milestone in our country's conquest of an age old enemy. On that day will be launched throughout the country the thirtieth Christmas Seal sale of the National Tuberculosis Association and its 2000 afffiliated state and local associations. For thirty years funds from these penny Christmas Seals have been used in an organized educational campaign to control tuberculosis.

It is tremendously encouraging to know that tuberculosis is no longer the leading cause of death and that the fight against this scourge is continuing without remission. However, the fine progress that has been made should not be permitted to arouse a false sense of security. Quite on the contrary there is need for continued and intensified activity. Especially should these efforts be directed to the elimination of the disease as it prevails among children, as well as young men and women, in which groups an unnecessarily high toll is exacted. There still exists too the necessity for the early discovery of tuberculous patients and their prompt hospitalization. When these obvious steps have been taken the complete and final victory over this disease will be brought nearer.

On the eve of the thirtieth Christmas Seal sale I urge all to do their part in supporting the nation-wide campaign. It is the duty of each local community to raise funds for its own protection against this enemy of homes and health.

Thirty-Five Frosh Are Issued Suits For Cage Season

Thirty-five enthusiastic freshmen basketball aspirants answered Coach Bob Cox's initial call and were issued suits yesterday. Regular practice sessions were begun in the gym of the Education Building.

According to the frosh mentor, the Yearling schedule will be completed in a few days and will contain 10 games.

The first fray will probably be with the Wayland College Jackrabbits, old rivals of the W. T. neophytes who split games with them last year. Tentative games are with Altus Junior College, Portales Junior College, and the Texas Tech Picadors.

Coach Cox has several potential candidates who should develop into one of the smoothest fives to wear the beginners colors of West Texas State.

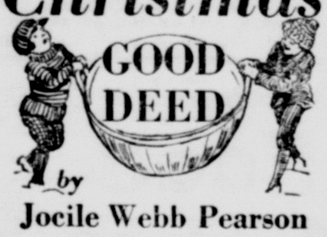
Their Christmas GOOD DEED



by Jocile Webb Pearson

BILLIE JONES adored his big brother. Jim had been a boy scout before going to college and to be a scout like Jim was Billie's one ambition.

"If we're goin' to be scouts," he confided to his chum Joe Perkins, we oughta begin practicin'."

"Yea, but how do we know how to begin?" inquired Joe.

"Huh," snorted Billie, "anyone can do a good deed every day."

"We can help our mothers," said Joe. "Sure," Replied Billie, "but this must be somethin' special like helpin' old Miss Riley carry her basket when it was icy, or somethin'. An' bein' Chrismus, we oughta give somethin'; mebbe a present, too. Say, I got an idee, Joe. Why can't we give her somethin' for our first good deed? She don't have a daddy or nobody to help her."

"But we ain't got money," objected Joe, "an' I bet she needs a lot of things—coal an' kindlin' an' everthin'."

"Leave it to me, Joe. I got a nother idee, but it's to be a secret. 'Tain't a good deed if ya tell anybody. Now cross your heart an' say: 'I'll never tell till death us do part.' There, that's the bindinest words I know."

Anyone would know it was Christmas by the spicy fragrance in the air. Even before one saw the big lighted tree in the living room.

There were many whispered conversations and signs and giggles between the two boys that Jim's keen eyes found amusing. Coming home one evening he surprised them in the act of smuggling a basket of coal out the back gate.

"Hey, fellows! Where you going with that?" It was Joe who blurted: "Billie says it ain't no good if ya tell." Billie hung his head. "We're just practicin' to be scouts," he stammered, "an this is our good deed. We been doin' it for two weeks—I mean takin' coal to Miss Riley. She's poor an' deaf an' ain't got no daddy to get her coal—half the time we take it from Joe's house"—Billie looked appealingly at Jim.

"An' she only had a teeny little bit," put in Joe, staunchly. "An' you're s'posed to give to folks Chrismus, ain't you?"

"I salute two mighty fine scouts right now," said Jim. "But first we'll have to make clear the scout ideas of property rights. Deliver your coal, then come up to my room and we'll talk things over."

When old Mrs. Riley hobbled to her door in response to a loud knock Christmas eve, she did not see two little boys scamper behind the coal shed, but she did see a huge basket filled with a generous supply of food, and many bulgy packages piled high on the top, with a "Merry Christmas to you" tied to it.

The "Glorified Christmas Pudding"

By Alice B. Palmer

A SOFT carpet of fresh snow sparkled in the sun and the whole of Christmas was in the room as Lois opened her eyes, yawned contentedly and then suddenly remembered the great conquest of the day—"the Christmas Pudding!"

"Oh Em," she shouted, radiant with joy and keen with excitement. "Wake up! Wake up! It's Christmas!"

"What's that?" murmured Em, sleepily. "Oh yes, hurrah for the fun! Is the pudding done?"

Every year, as far back as Lois and Em could remember, they had looked forward with youthful anticipation to the Glorified Christmas Pudding. 'Twas a Swedish rice delicacy, in which an almond had always been concealed. Tradition had proclaimed that the lucky person who came upon the holiday nut in his Christmas pudding was to be the first one married. What fun it had been through the year.

"Well, girls," spoke mother, beaming with the holiday spirit, "who is to get the almond in the Christmas pudding? This is leap year, you know."

Lois and Em giggled, knowingly, exchanging winks, as both were secretely engaged to be married.

Soon mother was busily engaged in the dishing up of this delicious pudding. It was being formed into cone-shaped mounds, resembling Christmas snow.

All eyes were now focused expectantly upon the rich creamy mountains of rice and they could scarcely wait until they dipped their spoons into its foamy depths. Lu was blinking at Em and carefully chewing each individual rice kernel, so as not to miss the almond. Em was slyly winking at mother and smiling confidently. Father was too pleased for words as he calmly viewed the whole situation with satisfied enthusiasm, secretly hoping that he would not come upon the almond.

Where on earth was the Christmas almond? All had quite finished with no sign of the coveted nut. A strange silence pervaded, coupled with a surprised sense of dismay and disappointment.

"Julia," called mother, to the girl in the kitchen, "have you eaten your rice pudding yet?"

"Yes, Mrs. Allen," promptly responded Julia.

"What is the matter, my dear, you look so upset?"

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Allen, but I almost broke my tooth on a strange nut I found in the pudding."

A louder roar of laughter than was ever heard before, permeated the holiday atmosphere as one by one they tried to explain the Christmas almond to Julia. As the laughter ended, the "Glorified Christmas Pudding" once more faded away into tradition.

Keeping Christmas

MARIAN turned slowly from the full length mirror where she had been surveying herself for a critical moment, and looked across the room at her twin sister.

"I'm so tired of all this Christmas fuss," she said languidly; "it is all so old-fashioned, so outdated."

"Are you expressing my feelings?" Nadine's voice was even more languid; "but how in the world are we going to make our dear family feel as we do about the matter? You know they are already in the throes of Christmas preparations." She threw out her slender hands in a gesture of infinite boredom as she finished.

"We can let them know that we won't be a part of the silly business—we can serve notice on them that we are going to work against all the noise and fuss that is made about Christmas."

Forgetting their pose of boredom and sophistication for a moment, the seventeen - year - old twins jumped excitedly around the room. "Just think of how they will be shocked!" Marian cried; "I can see mother and dad. It is all going to be so exciting—fighting the world, so to speak."

But they were taken back quite a little when they announced their big news . . . mother's voice was very serious. "If you really feel that way, I guess the rest of us will have to celebrate without you. We're going to miss you a lot, of course, but we must consider your feelings." The twins failed to see the twinkle in her eyes as she looked across the table at dad.

As if to make matters worse, Bill and Dick laughed in derision at their plan. "I bet they'll be on their knees to get in on our fun before Christmas," Bill predicted. And as if that were not enough, he suggested that now there would be nothing to buy for the twins, maybe he could have the moving picture outfit he had wanted so long. "I hope you don't change your mind, sweet sisters," he cautioned, as he proceeded to put a huge piece of pie in his mouth. "I do want that picture machine pretty bad."

"I'm Going to Do Like Everybody Else," She Said.

The twins threw scornful glances in his direction; they couldn't trust themselves to speak. There were things they had forgotten when they made their big resolve to do away with Christmas preparations. As soon as dinner was over, they hurried from the table.

The days that followed were not very happy. The twins could find no one interested in their plan to change the way of keeping Christmas. Even the most modern of their friends laughed them to scorn. No one was really interested in advancement, they decided. Here they were willing and eager to get a new crusade started, one that would save time and temper and money, and no one, not even their best friends, would lend a hand. They grew fretful, impatient, even peeved at each other.

One evening Nadine came home and found Marian in their mother's bedroom, peering into some boxes that had just been delivered. Nadine smiled to herself, and hurried from the doorway so Marian would not see her.

But next day in the toy department of Smith's store, things came to a showdown. The twins ran into each other, found themselves side by side clutching for foolish things that lay on the counter. Brown eyes challenged blue as they stood in the crowded aisle. Guilt showed plainly on both faces.

Then Nadine was speaking, quickly, incoherently: "You might as well know, Marian, I'm chucking your silly plan. I'm going to do like everybody else. I'm going to make a big fuss about Christmas. I want to push through the crowds—to buy foolish things—to hang up holly wreaths—to—to do just everything! . . . And if I'm not mistaken, you're just dying to do the same?"

"You're absolutely right," Marian answered, utterly careless of the amused glances thrown in their direction. "We've been a pair of fools, but we're going to have one grand and glorious time in the two days that are left . . . We're going to make the biggest fuss about Christmas that has ever been made before."

OIL-PLATE YOUR ENGINE

This is exactly true: Oil-Plating supplies lubrication in LESS THAN NO TIME AT ALL!

Faster than "instantly"... faster than the fastest-flowing Winter oil might even begin to flow, Oil-Plating is ready to lubricate.

That's because a genuine Plating of Conoco Germ Processed oil is always left firmly bonded to every working part. Like any other real Plating, this Oil-Plating cannot run off. After hours or days of standing in the cold, Oil-Plating is still perfectly ready-to-go.

Now these days you read on every side, how poorly-oiled starting causes most engine wear, and how fast a Winter oil ought to flow. But you cannot have even a doubt of sure starting-lubrication, when it is always UP IN ADVANCE. That's Oil-Plating . . . a plain, straight, economic reason for changing to your correct free-flowing Winter grade of Conoco Germ Processed oil — patented. Costs no more than changing by hunch.

"MEET ME IN CANYON" SAYS SANTA CLAUS

Her Happiest Christmas

FOR many years Marelu had not been exactly happy on Christmas; somehow she had never received the pretty things bestowed upon other girls. "If they all only knew how I have secretly longed for those soft, dainty luxuries," thought Marlu, as she sat before the fireplace, just three days before Christmas.

"There are those kitchen aprons, for instance, from dear old aunt Lucia. Every year, as far back as I can remember, it has always been aprons. I must have almost a dozen by now. Then there is cousin Marie, who has been sending the inevitable handkerchief right along, year after year. There must be quite a collection of them, too."

While she had been grateful and thankful for these kind remembrances she had not been exactly thrilled.

A happy Christmas thought suggested itself to Marelu as she gazed out at the slender icicles shining like silver in the moonlight. "I know what I'll do. I'll start right now and wrap up all these things into pretty Christmas parcels and give them to some one who really needs them."

When Christmas day arrived Marelu started out with her basket brimming full of beautifully wrapped and tied Christmas gifts. Every step she took over the holiday carpet of snow represented a kindly thought of cheer.

"Merry Christmas," she cried, as she handed a bright colored parcel to dear old Linda Larsen.

"The very same to you," said she, with a questioning look of surprise. The next moment she was proudly unwrapping a pair of pretty bath towels. Marlene and Dolly, two little girls around the corner, danced up and down with joy when they saw the snowy handkerchiefs with colored borders. Marelu smiled happily as she left the little girls and proceeded to her next stop. Effie Lynn was overwhelmed with surprise when a gift was handed her. She explained that it had been years since she had received a Christmas present

After several other interesting calls Marelu started for home. The street lights flashed on and the glimmering Christmas trees joined in the ceremony on all sides of her. As she drew near her own home she stood still a moment and admired the grandeur of the dark pines encircling the house under a white burden of snow. The variations of colors gleaming from the windows seemed to be stretching out to meet the pines.

Inside the house was warmth and joy and Christmas cheer as the family gathered about the Christmas tree, pointed with the star of Bethlehem. Marelu was just in time for the celebration. Bobby had been chosen to read off the names upon the gifts and all eyes were centered upon the huge basket containing them.

"First on the program," shouted Bobby, "is for mother." All wondered what it could be.

"A gorgeous lamp shade," cried mother, as she held it up for all to see.

While still admiring this thing of beauty, Bobby shouted louder than ever, "something for the governor, himself. Get ready, pop, for your surprise."

"What can the strange package be, for goodness sake?" said father, his eyes popping with interest. "Well, I do declare, if it isn't a golf set. Just what I have wanted for a long time," as he started to examine it.

"Oh boy, hold out your hands and catch, Dot, a ducky package for you, all tied with silver cord. What is it? Open it quick!"

Dot removed the bright red tissue and disclosed a white wool skating outfit.

Marelu had been so absorbed in what the others were receiving that she had forgotten all about herself. For the first time in many years she had received the things she really adored. With a heart full of appreciation and joy, she suddenly shouted, "Merry Christmas!" The others did not quite comprehend the extent of Marelu's enthusiasm, but she, herself, felt, somehow, that this had been the very happiest, merriest Christmas she had ever had.

THE CANYON NEWS

HE WAS a small boy named Tim who had never been more than ten miles from his home in the Ozark hills. His teacher said he couldn't even bound Arkansas, his own state, but what his teacher didn't know was how well he knew the mountain "crick" and the hill slopes circled with green-gold pine trees that bounded his father's tiny farm. He also knew what it took to keep a family of six children and that for as long as he could remember his father's farm had scarcely been able to produce enough to stretch over every need.

It was just before Christmas time that he heard his father tell his mother that if there was to be anything "extra" to give the day its meaning for the children, he'd have to get the ax and hack out a few ties. Her face went white, for she knew what that meant. So often had they been forced to remain on the hacking of a few ties to be sold to the railroad for dire necessities that practically all their timber available for that purpose was gone. And trees don't grow over night. She could tell by the look on her husband's face that he was taking a desperate and back-breaking chance of finding a few logs tough enough for the commission man to buy.

As she looked out of the window and saw the passing cars of winter "touristers" on the new scenic road the government had built through the hills, she wondered by what magic folks could come to own automobiles and take time off like that to go traveling. But she hadn't many moments to spare on such thoughts, for her husband had returned to say that the ax was gone. Could one of the children have taken it? Or what with the new road so near and strangers riding through the hills, had someone made off with it?

The father had borrowed an ax from a willing neighbor but on the day before Christmas he was silent as he unhitched his team in the wagon lot. Christmas tomorrow and he had been forced to bring back the load from town. The commission man had been truly sorry, for he did need ties; yet none of these were large enough.

He crept up to a window, lost in the sense of failure that made him ashamed to walk to his own door. There an odd sight straightened him. Inside were Tim and his mother joyously trimming a Christmas tree. Tim raced to the door to keep the younger children from bursting gleefully into the room and learning its great secret.

When the father entered the house, no one asked him about the ties. "Dad, dad!" Tim shouted. "Do you know those red berry trees that grow way up the crick? Awful hard to get to, but when I found 'em I thought they were so purty I took some to school. The teacher said, 'that's holly' and then I read about holly and learned that folks will pay for it to have it for Christmas. So I gathered a lot of it and made me a holly stand up on the new road just hopin' they would. And dad, they did buy it! Stopped their cars and said, 'Why it's holly; who would have thought we'd find it here!' They wanted so much I had to work awful hard getting it, but gee, it was fun! I wanted to surprise mom and you, and now I'll tell you both that I made $27.82. There's $20 right now in that bureau drawer left after buying our Christmas. Gee dad, I love this old farm! It's got lots of surprises on it yet. This one ain't the last one."

The father brushed a tear from his eye and kissed his wife. Then he shook hands with Tim. "You're the kind of son a man can be right proud to own," he choked.

"But dad, will you forgive me?" the boy suddenly implored.

"Why Tim, forgive you what?" the father asked in surprise.

The boy led the way to the kitchen. "You see dad, I just had to have it?"

The father pretended to frown as Tim pointed and then he winked.

"Well, being as it's just about Christmas for us, as well as the rest of the world, I guess I'll have to overlook it." For there in a far corner of the room stood the ax. It was Tim who had borrowed it.

"THANK goodness," said Martha Goodwin, bustling about her kitchen, "Christmas comes but once a year." She wiped back a loose wisp of graying hair with a weary gesture. "But it will be fine seeing you again, Lad," she murmured, thinking of her distant son. "Now, le"s see. Those star cookies you're so fond of—" She glanced at the hurrying clock.

Loud shrieks of laughter under her window interrupted her thoughts. Those new neighbor children again. If they were dirtying up her freshly swept wr lk! She strode grimly to the porch. There was a path in the snow from their yard, around hers, and back again to their own, where all four of them had apparently trudged, pushing a snow ball, across her walk in two places. A tussel started suddenly, and they were all tumbling about in the snow, shrieking at the top of their voices.

Martha scolded shrilly at them, and they stood up, an abashed little line of stair steps. "The idea! On Christmas, too!" Martha chided. "Whatever is the matter with your ma, that she lets you make such a racket?"

"She's sick," answered the oldest girl.

"Sick! Then all the more reason why you should keep still. Shame on you." The little group stood like statues.

Martha tucked in the wisp of hair. "You children come in here and sit still while I work, and I'll tell you a story," she invited. "Mind you wipe your feet."

"I suppose it should be a Christmas story," Martha began. "Do you know about the shepherds and the wise men?"

"Yes'm," they chorused. "We go to Sunday school," added the oldest girl.

"Then," Martha asked her, "shall I tell you about Santa Claus?"

Her face clouded a little. "Mother told us that," she answered soberly.

"Oh," said Martha. She dusted the flour from her hands and turned to baste the turkey. Four pairs of eager eyes watched her every move. The doorbell rang.

"Laddie! Good heavens," cried Martha, slipping off her apron, and rushed to the door.

But instead it was a telegram:

"AWFULLY SORRY DARLING BUT I JUST CAN'T GET AWAY STOP DO TRY TO HAVE A MERRY CHRISTMAS STOP GO ON A SPREE AND I'LL FOOT THE BILL STOP EXPECT TO BE ABLE TO GET DOWN FOR NEW YEAR'S AND WILL EXPLAIN EVERYTHING THEN LOVE LADDIE."

Martha Goodwin read it twice. Then she smoothed the straying wisp of hair and went back to the kitchen.

"Well," the older girl was explaining, "it's sort of like a chicken, I guess, only ever so much bigger." The four children looked up as Martha entered. "Why, what's the matter, Mrs. Goodwin?"

"My son—I was expecting him—he isn't coming."

"Gee," came a sympathetic chorus. "And you'd fixed everything so nice and—and Christmassy."

"I'm not going to have it spoiled," Martha decided. "Here," she said and draped the holly wreath over the youngest's arm. "You," she said to the next one, "carry the potatoes, and you take the mince pie—careful, it's hot—and you," to the eldest, "take the vegetables. I think I can manage the turkey."

"But where are we going?"

"Over to your house. Weren't you about to miss out on Christmas dinner?"

"Dinner first, then presents," she suggested, and when, having eaten all they could hold, they gathered about the holly, she found a crudely wrapped present for herself. It was a picture scrapbook, somewhat smudged.

Were those tears in Martha Goodwin's eyes? Surely not, for she was smiling.

"Why, thank you," she exclaimed. "Such a lovely surprise: My," she added, "I do wish Christmas came more than once a year."

last few years. Senator Small, whose son is captain of the varsity football team at Texas University, was especially interested in the athletic set-up here, and declared that money must be provided to complete Buffalo Courts and the Recreation Hall.

Representative Tarwater spoke for his group at the dinner program. He said, "I have known the West Texas State College ever since the first building was opened; the campus was a windswept, lonesome place in those days. I have watched the growth of the college. I cannot think of words with which to praise the college administration for the fine things that have been accomplished with the relatively small amount of money which has been provided by the legislature, and with the Federal funds which have come to the campus in the last two years.

"Even finer than the material growth," he continued, "has been the growth in influence of this college; here the young learn what life really means, and the Canyon influence is carried into every community from which the college boys and girls come."

Jones Adds National Note

Congressman Jones added the national note to the dinner program. He said, "It makes me very happy to see and think about the development that has come to our West Texas in the last few years, and I am especially delighted to see the fine things that have been done on this campus with the money the government has provided." Passing then to the national viewpoint he said, "The reason the United States can have a hard-fought campaign like the one just closed without violence is that ours is a nation of generous winners and losers. When a contest is over, the country settles down to work instead of seething with unrest. Institutions such as this college give me faith in our future. The quality and character of the instructors assures the quality of the citizenship of the future."

Mr. Guleke spoke briefly of the hope of the State Board of Education that Texas will have the greatest educational system in the entire south. He mentioned also his interest in W. T. and stated that during the construction of the Education Building he made fifty trips to Canyon to consult with President Hill upon problems which arose.

Speaking at the dinner, Senator Small paid the highest tribute to W. T., and the work which was being accomplished here. Senator Small is recognized as an outstanding leader of the Senate and his interest in W. T. has always been of great aid to the College.

Girls Entertain Visitors

Cousins Hall girls furnished the entertainment numbers for the evening. Mrs. Agnes Smith first introduced Mrs. C. D. Wofford, Misses Tennessee Malone, Florence McMurtry and Hellen Hickman, and Mrs. Elizabeth Fry Page, who is a guest at the Hall, and Mrs. J. A. Hill. Following these introductions Elizabeth Deal, president of the Hall, Lou Ella McDade, treasurer, Marjorie Warren, social chairman, Wilhelmina Cleek, vespers chairman, Erma Westmoreland, annual representative, Margaret Esther Hill, decorations chairman, and Mary Miles Hall, refreshments chairman, were presented.

Miss Deal and Miss McDade welcomed the guests.

Next a sextette, composed of Edith Rumbaugh, Margaret Esther Hill, Billie Ruth King, Annis Fowler, Marjetta Ewing, and Gaynelle Douglas, accompanied by Melen Osgood, sang two numbers. The first "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," was dedicated to President Hill. Claudia Sue Mosely did a tap dance and was encored, and Margaret Esther Hill whistled two numbers with Virginia Hohlaus as her accompanist.

According to W. A. Warren, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, the dinner, which was given by the Chamber of Commerce co-operating with the college, was considered a very happy conclusion for a busy day which was spent by college and town folk and lawmakers in becoming acquainted with the problems of each other.

Mrs. Knight.

Mrs. Knight became very active in church and civic enterprises after coming to Canyon. Soon after her marriage she organized the first Sunday School in Canyon, meetings being held in the court house. She was a charter member of the Presbyterian church when it was organized here.

Mrs. Knight was a member of the Order of Eastern Star; was a charter member of the Mother-in-Law Club, and was president of the Pioneer Club.

The funeral service was conducted at the Presbyterian Church Monday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Chas. L. Dickey, the pastor. Interment followed in Dreamland Cemetery in charge of the Blackburn-Shaw Funeral Home.

Surviving are: The husband, John Knight; three daughters, Mrs. Pat Wederbrook of Hereford; Mrs. W. B. Hicks of Wellington; Mrs. Ruth Pearl Word of Boulder, Colo.; one sister, Mrs. Susan R. Heller of Canyon; one brother, S. E. Roberts of Yates Center, Kansas. Mr. Roberts spent some time here this fall visiting with his two sisters. There are ten grand-children.

Mrs. Knight enjoyed the friendship and esteem of a large circle of friends who were grieved to hear of her death, which although not unexpected, came as a shock to the pioneers who have been banded together during the past half century in the development of this section of the Plains.

Water Conservation

followed the original convention, the "organization committee" voted to have the new organization composed of a member for each precinct of the more than 30 counties involved. These members are to be selected by the people of the precinct.

The committee asked the WPA, the Soil Conservation Service, and the Resettlement Administration to each furnish one man to meet with the group in an advisory capacity.

Each county at the regular meeting scheduled for December 19, will present its water conservation and flood control problems by items.

The committee will meet again at 10 o'clock on the morning of December 19, and the next regular meeting of the entire new organization is scheduled for 1:30 o'clock that afternoon.

Various speakers from over the Panhandle offered the problems that now confront this area in water conservation for general discussion yesterday.

Gene Howe called attention to the need of game preserves, recreational centers, and lakes to furnish water for the area. He presented the idea that if the government failed to exploit the water conservation idea here, if a group of men would put the idea over in one or two places as private enterprises, the attention of the government might be so focused on this area that they could not overlook its water conservation and flood control needs.

Mr. Warren pointed out the necessity of having an organization which could put over the projects necessary for the continuance of the Panhandle as a suitable place for habitation. He stated that with dams "we could create more lakes, which would cause more rainfall, and which would keep the shallow water level supply in abundance." The loss of the tourist trade, referred to by Warren as "the greatest crop in the United States today" was also brought to attention by the Canyon man, who said that if shade trees, cool places, water in which to fish, and other recreational facilities that increased water conservation would bring, were inaugurated in the Panhandle country "we would get our just share of this 'crop'."

crops have started growing again and the fields are green.

Anton Beckman stated Tuesday that wheat in the Umbarger section was certainly in fine shape. There is enough moisture in the ground to carry the crop through until spring, believes Mr. Beckman. About the only wheat to die in that section of the county was volunteer crops which were too thick.
